OUR BOSTON LETTER.

Lillian Whiting Writes of Phillips Brooks and His Church.

(Special Correspondence.)

Boston, April 28.—Rev. Phillips Brooks, D. D., rector of Trinity church, Boston, is one of the most impressive figures of this century. His parish is by no means limited to the local boundaries of Trinity, nor can his ministry be exclusively claimed by the Episcopal church. The impression made by this great preacher upon multitudes of his hearers is so profound and so sacred that only the hope to convey something of his influence to that wider circle outside his own city could justify one in venturing to make him the subject of a sketch.

Trinity rectory is a handsome house of the Queen Anne style with modifications, and the apartment where the rector receives his friends—half library, half drawing room—is a beautiful one. Fine engravings of the great classic and religious masters of the world adorn the walls, and a great fireplace, with beautiful carvings, lends stateliness to the room. Nothing could be more reassuring than the sympathetic kindness, the dignified charm of Dr. Brooks' manner.

Trinity parish, in Boston, dates back to 1735, and the history of its ministry is that of a long line of noble men; but it entered on a new and higher field of usefulness with the advent of the present rector. It was in November, 1850, that Phillips Brooks came from the Church of the Holy Trinity in Philadelphia to Trinity in Boston. He had then just entered on his thirty-fifth year. He was born in Boston, graduated from Harvard in 1835, and studied theology at Alexandria, and he was ordained in 1839 and called as assistant to Dr. Vincent in Philadelphia, at the Church of the Advent, from which, in 1862, he went to that of Holy Trinity, and eight years later he came to Trinity in Boston.

LILLIAN WHITING.

In 1870 the new Trinity church was erected, at the cost of a million of dollars, under the great architect, H. M. Richardson. It is a leading object of interest, always visited by the tourist, the devotee or the special student of ecclesiastical art. The style is a free rendering of the French Romanesque, including the ancient Aquitaine. The interior decorations are very rich and are a monument to the taste of the artist, John LaFarge. The memorial windows include one by Burne Jones, and a bust of Dean Stanley, the work of Miss Mary Grant, was presented by the dean's family to the church and is placed in the chancel.

It was the desire of Mr. Brooks that Trinity be made a free church, but this proving impracticable, the spacious galleries are free, and, at his wish, a row of chairs have been placed around the chancel and several long seats on each side which are freely offered. "As many as can come and sit with me," he said, "are welcome." The rector smilingly remarked:

During July and August the seats are free and Dr. Brooks preaches to the same great congregations that throng to hear him in winter. These congregations are very largely outside the Episcopal faith. The rector intones the litany "to make it as easy as possible for them," and all the beautiful forms of the service are made impressive without being oppressive. The afternoon service is especially poetic. The sermon is followed by prayer, with musical responses from the choir, and while the late afternoon sunlight falls softly through pictured windows over the vast, kneeling congregation, we may hear:

Abide with me: fast falls the evening:

The darkness deepens: Lord, with me abide.

When other helpers fail and comforts flee,

Help of the helpless, O abide with me.

And in the holy hush that follows the deep, musical, impassioned voice of the rector is heard saying: "The Lord bless you and keep you; the Lord make his face to shine upon you and grant you every blessing."

LILLIAN WHITING.

The Coming Census.

New York, April 28.—It seems to me that none of the calculations whose guesses at the population I have seen have made sufficient allowance for the youth and vigor of recent immigrants. They add the immigration, but nearly all make it too small, and add nothing for the immigrants' children. Apparently they think that the 2,000,000 young people in the addition have remained unmarried, and the young married people have stopped having children since they became Americans. Let us indulge in some figures.

The largest immigration, in 1883, was 288,922; the smallest, in 1884, was 243,343; the total for the ten years, including the overflow from Canada, falls little if any short of 6,000,000, all but an insignificant fraction being under 45 years of age. It is certain that a least half a million young married couples were among them, and, as the boys and girls of ten or twelve years who came first are now men and women, there must have been something like a million new families formed among them. Taking the average of children in their class, as shown by the census of 1880, we can credit out newly made citizens with having added over two million children (deaths excluded) to the population. Set down the foreign addition, therefore, at something over 8,000,000.

In 1890 the colored people were 190 in each 1,000, or a little below one-fifth of the total population; in 1880 they were 132 in 1,000, or a fraction over one-eighth. As the foreigners have since contributed a number about equal to the total colored, it is not likely that the latter will sink nearly so low as the census of 1880. My general conclusion is that the population will be at least 65,000,000, that the so-called foreign element will be 18 per cent, and that the colored will be not only absolutely fewer than most people expect, but a much smaller fraction of the whole.

A New Fashionable Fad.

The fashionable world has begun to adopt a custom long prevalent in the Tyrol. A bride in that region always receives from her mother a new linen handkerchief on her wedding morn, for the purpose of drying her tears at leaving the home of her childhood. This is not only a precious souvenir of youth and is buried with her. These "tear handkerchiefs" are now coming into vogue among the upper tondom of England and America.

Gen. Banks' Politeness.

One of the elevator conductors at the Capitol said to me today: "I carry the most promiscuous crowd in the country. The highest in the land and the lowest tramp all take rides on my car. It's a great place for the study of human nature. Now, I have been running this car for six years, and I have carried thousands of people, and yet, during all that time, I have been thanked by only one man—Gen. Banks. He thanks me every time he rides. It struck me as being funny at first, but now I am getting used to the old gentleman's politeness."—Cor. Boston Traveller.

Not a Pimple on Baby

Baby one year old. Bad with Eczema, Hair all gone. Scalp covered with eruptions. Cured by Cuticura. Hair splendid and not a pimple on him.

Cured by Cuticura

I cannot say enough in praise of the CUTICURA. My boy, when one year of age, was so bad with eczema that he lost all of his hair. His scalp was covered with eruptions, which the doctors said was scald head, and that his hair would never grow again. Despairing of a cure from physicians, I began the use of the CUTICURA REMEDIES, and, I am happy to say, with the most perfect success. His hair is now splendid, and there is not a pimple on him. I recommend the CUTICURA REMEDIES to mothers as the most speedy, economical, and sure cure for all skin diseases of infants and children, and feel that every mother who has an afflicted child will thank me for so doing.

MRS. M. E. WOODBURN, Norway, Me.

Fever Sore Eight Years

I must extend to you the thanks of one of my customers, who has been cured by using the CUTICURA REMEDIES, of an old sore, caused by a long spell of sickness of fever eight years ago. He was so bad he could not leave his bed, and his hair was all gone, but is happy to say he is now entirely well, and has a dollar. He requests me to use his name, which is H. H. Goss, merchant.

THE GLOBE'S NEWSPAPERS.

In the publication of dailies the United States leads with a total of 1,404. Germany comes next with 891.

New York state alone possesses a larger number of newspapers than are found upon all continents south of the equator.

Great Britain possesses 229 dailies, but their average circulation is almost five times as great as that of the United States.

The Berliner Morgenpost, a semi-monthly paper of fashions, circulates 600,000 copies, 350,000 in German and the balance in other languages.

The first paper to appear in the United States was The Boston News Letter, April 24, 1704. Canada's first paper was The Halifax Gazette, in 1763.

The oldest paper in Europe is The Post Zeitung, published at Frankfurt in 1610, while that with the greatest circulation is Le Petit Journal of Paris, whose daily issue is over 600,000.

In its number of papers (43) and amount of circulation, Paris runs ahead of all other cities. It publishes twelve more dailies than London, New York, Philadelphia and Boston combined.

No less than 4,355 papers daily make their appearance in the world. Some of these appear in two or three languages, one of them generally being English. Fifty-nine different languages are employed.

The publications of India comprise many languages. Those in the native tongues are said to be more thoroughly read and circulated in proportion to the number of copies issued than those of any other country.

The island of Borneo, generally supposed to be inhabited by "wild men and savages," boasts of the smallest regularly published newspaper in the world. This is The Sarawak Gazette, an English paper published once a quarter, inches wide by thirteen inches long, and was first issued in August, 1870.

The little island of Ireland, 300 miles long and 200 broad, and isolated from the great continent of civilization, is found to have as great a number of newspapers as are printed in the vernacular tongue of the empire of China. The newspapers of Ireland are published at a point farther north than any other journals in existence.

The Pekin Gazette of China is the first and oldest newspaper publication in the world. It has a daily issue of 10,000 copies, and still retains its original form and makeup of 1,600 years ago. Its size is four inches wide by ten inches long. Each issue has about eighteen leaves of soft paper with ragged edges, printed only on one side, in Chinese characters.

Austria claims newspapers printed in a greater variety of languages than any other country. These comprise German, Italian, French, Magyar or Hungarian, Greek, Latin, Polish, Serbian, Slavonian, Rumanian, Rutherfordian, Croatian, Czech, Slovenian, and others. The most remarkable of these, and perhaps of the entire globe, is The Acta Computationis Literarum Universarum, a semi-monthly review of comparative literature.
